Referrals and links

With its ruling of 12 May 1998, the Court in Hamburg decided that a website may be held partly responsible for the contents of other websites if it includes direct or indirect links to these websites on its own pages. We hereby expressly declare that no illegal content was in evidence on the linked page at the time of establishing the link. We have no bearing on current or future presentations, content or authorship on linked pages. As such we hereby expressly distance ourselves from all content of all linked pages, even if such pages contain a link to our website. This declaration refers to all links and referrals included on our website including those posted by third parties in the visitors books set up and operated by us, discussion forums and mailing lists and in the contents of other interactive pages which can be filled in by users of our website. Only the proprietor of the linked or referenced site is liable for illegal, incorrect or incomplete information and in particular for damage incurred by the use or non-use of such information.
